Hrant Dink and Armenians in Turkey Hrant Dink's courage cost his life. But he won ...

ISN

Commentary by Hratch Tchilingirian for openDemocracy.net (26/02/07) The assassination of the Turkish-Armenian journalist Hrant Dink on 19 January 2007 and its aftermath highlighted both change and resistance to change in Turkish society. To understand how far Turkey has travelled in the past generation, Hratch Tchilingirian examines the role of Hrant Dink himself in the context of the Armenian community of which he was voice, critic and emblem. On 18 October 1994, a press conference called by the then Patriarch of the Armenian Church, Karekin Kazanjian, was held at the Armenian patriarchate in Kumkapi, Istanbul. It was organized to correct what the church saw as misinformation amounting to a slander campaign against the Armenian church in...
